Global and Local Partnership Development

At Griffith University (2013-2014):

As Director of the Global Centre for Evidence-based Corrections and Sentencing, I developed memorandum of understanding (MOUs) covering collaborative research, faculty exchange and visits, and student exchange/ joint course development with the following institutions: University of Glasgow, George Mason University, University of the Virgin Islands, University of California, Irvine, Florida State University, Rutgers University, and the University of Shizoka. In addition, the Centre included over 100 individual consortium and advisory board members from over 30 countries representing each global region. We also developed close research and program development ties with Queensland Corrective Services in the area of performance measurement and evidence-based program development in prison and community corrections.

At University of Massachusetts, Lowell (2011-2012):

Developed partnership agreement with University of Glasgow for faculty exchange and summer course offerings, and organized fall, 2012 presentation by Fergus McNeill, Professor, University of Glasgow for corrections officials in Massachusetts. We also developed a MOU with the Middlesex County, Massachusetts Sheriff's Office covering research collaboration.

In addition, I am the founding director of the Global Community Corrections Initiative, and in this role, I am developing a global community corrections data base, and forming partnerships with researchers representing each global region. www.globcci.org
